“If there is one thing educators Can agree on, it’s this: children do better in school when them parents get involved in them learning.”

William J. Bennett

Music, dance, painting, and theater are keys that unlock profound human understanding and accomplishment .. by William J. Bennett, [US Secretary of Education]

I am sure we all agree with this quote! Co curricular activities are an essential element of education, just like reading, writing, and other subjects. We at SRMS have always prioritized academics along with overall wellbeing of our dear students. Art and music are cultural aspects of our lives. You see it anywhere and everywhere you go. From art on billboards to the radio playing, art and music will be everywhere.

The extra-curricular activities are important sites for developing important attributes and skill-sets. Engaging the students in a diverse range of activities from literary to sports to music & dance, plays, creations might enable our young generation to craft a particular narrative of the self that enables them to gain an edge over others in the competition for jobs and university places

Art and Music education which are mandatory in Japan, Hungary, and the Netherlands, are also some of the countries that score highest on math and science test among most other countries. It is scientifically proven that the arts can expand your brain.

Keeping in mind the importance of co-curricular activities along with the university prescribed curriculum, all necessary extra- curricular activities are interwoven into monthly calendar by the college to provide rich and varied experiences to our students.

This will also help them build an impressive resume.

Thinking on these aspects “Spandan -2023” with the theme VIHAAN (Reviving the tradition) was organised by SRMS CETR, SRMS College of Nursing & SRMS college of Law with VERVE & Caring Hands Club. “Spandan 2023” denotes enthusiasm and this was obvious in every student and individual present anywhere in the campus.

We will ensure that students are engaged meaningfully both in class and on field.

Work from Home

All the great things may not start from your comfort zone. Also, it is undeniable and something very usual that one needs to step out from the comfort zone to achieve something big. But Nature has its own plans. The way it taught everyone recently during the pandemic, to step out of the comfort zones. It has also given a chance to achieve whatever plans people had from their very own comfortable dwellings i.e., their very own homes.

WORK FROM HOME is something that is on everyone's mouth in the present times when the world is hit hard by a pandemic known as COVID 19 that can be expanded as Corona Virus in December 19. The pandemic brought down every aspect of human productivity and made it confined to their own homes. We have seen the world-famous names such as Walt Disney, Bill Gates and many more who started their journey from their own very homes and now we are stuck in a scenario where we have no other option but to eat at home, work at home, work from home.

The kids had no more parks but they need to study at home and play at home. Working from home is not only by choice but also a necessity or the need of the hour. Equally important is to keep the students involved and engaged in the online classes.

The paper discusses various measures for the same. This paper is a case study of how teachers gradually shifted to online teaching and the challenges they had to face while engaging learners while working from Home.

Introduction

Work from Home is something that is on everyone's tongue in the present times when the world is hit hard by a pandemic known as COVID 19 that can be expanded as Corona Virus in December 19. People are getting ample of time for the things they have always wanted to do but time became a major issue. The teachers of many institutes have now got the time to be double productive with the same input.

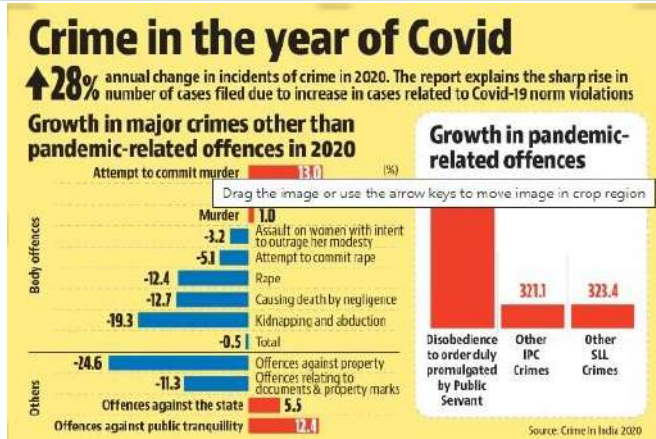

Could we ever imagine teaching our kids online by creating our video lectures which we send them to study and the same video lectures are being used to be posted online on our own blogs and YouTube channels. On the smarter side if you're smart enough to upload them on YouTube first and then sending the link to your students. It's like BOOM to have 100 views in a day. Even the students are much curious to like and subscribe these videos. So, one can easily achieve a great number of followers on their blogs if using the time wisely. Catalytic development of the online teaching need and solutions

Since lockdown started from last week of March 2020, teachers initially started online classes by creating WhatsApp group and did practice teaching in which rudimentary concepts were taught. After a week or so new syllabus started to be taught and most of the teachers were themselves able to use - Voice chat for interaction, Text chat for Instructional exchange, Google form and Survey monkey-based home work and assignments. In a few days all other teachers picked up the methods and started teaching without any difficulty.

During summer vacation tenure various Online Conferences were organized by the school for the teachers and also organized by CBSE and Publishers to ensure that teachers use standard methods of online teaching. During this vacation time, teachers prepared their online content and equipped themselves with white boards, pen tablets, Mobile Camera etc in the best possible manner. Further online classes again resumed in its full swing from May 18, 2020 in which teachers are now acting as proficient online tutors and there is no technical challenge Infront of them.

CRIME AND PANDEMIC

The concept of crime is different according to the opinion of the individuals. It has also changed its meaning from one generation to another. In a general sense, crime is an act or omission of any act which is not accepted by society or taken as morally incorrect.

The rate of crime has increased day by day and this type of natural disaster like COVID-19 assists crime to emerge in society not just to fulfill greediness but sometimes by exigent. The shortage of hospitals, oxygen cylinder, woods for funerals or for cremation, impelled society to sob. Society started exploring for new opportunities for livelihood some of them are on the tactic path and some are not.

When we take fresh air, the idea or positivity automatically comes to our mind but when the circumstances are not in our control, we feel compelled and the situations bound us to do something which is morally incorrect.

Creative minds are the most delicate part of society. Creativity should be used in a positive manner otherwise it can erect disaster for everyone there is a say that a sword needs its cover same sharp mind need the right path otherwise. They will endanger unhackneyed hurdles instead of forge for society, as in the case of COVID -19 there is the emergence of advance crime during this period which accelerates Cyber Crime, Banking fraud whereas it also decreases the cases of traditional crime by 200,000 cases.

This role is played by a lockdown period in which people are restricted to do some activities, so a criminal mind retrieve new opportunity to commit a crime under those some activities like Ravi Kant, President of the voluntary organization

Shakti Vahini, reported that traffickers are replacing their regular method and with red light areas occlude during lockdown, these activities are shifting to residential areas in the acquisition of massage parlors and spas. "We have tracked 200 cases where traffickers were operating in the grab of spas and massage parlors in 2020 and 2021".
